

Make the critical choices before the market makes them for you.

I help leaders navigate AI-shaped markets by getting to the real business problem, making the critical choices, and concentrating limited resources on what will move performance most.

THE PRINCIPLE

Before solving the problem, make sure you are solving the right one.

Leadership

What leaders are already trying to answer.

The page should invite recognition before it sells services. These are the questions that earn the conversation.

01 Where will our next stage of growth come from?

02 What is AI changing about how customers discover, compare and choose us?

03 What is really constraining performance?

04 Which opportunities deserve our limited resources?

05 What should we stop, start or double down on?

06 Why is the strategy not translating into execution?

Senior strategic judgement, deliberately kept practical.

Your team owns implementation. Specialist providers can be brought in where required. My role is to help leadership get to the real problem, choose what matters, and stay focused on value.

01

Strategy and management workshops

Challenge assumptions, surface the real constraint, resolve competing priorities and leave with decisions that can be acted on.

02

Fractional C-level counsel

Senior-level thinking without adding another full-time executive, especially when the issue crosses strategy, performance, operations and change.

03

Executive sounding board

Structured conversations to test thinking, interpret change and keep attention on the decisions that matter while your team implements.

You need one when the decision matters.

Ideal moments: an inflection point, noisy evidence, competing priorities, or finite resources that cannot fund every good idea

Growth has stalled or become harder

Performance is not moving proportionately.

A major decision is approaching

Expansion, pricing or restructuring has consequences.

AI is reshaping your market

You can see behaviour changing, but not what matters.

Leadership is split on priorities

Several plausible options, no common frame.

Strategy is not becoming execution

Operating reality is getting in the way.

There is simply too much to do

Every initiative looks important.

Strategy matters most when it changes what happens next.
